

A Disappearing Man    October 25,2006

One day when Sammy was walking to school Sammy wants more glory. He wants his family to be wealthy. He picked up a leaf. He heard a voice. There was nobody to be seen. He looked at the ground. He picked up the only leaf he could find. He looked at the leaf.

It was the leaf that was talking. He dropped the leaf and stepped on it. Then he heard the voice behind him. It was a man. The man was a skinny guy. His height was up to average. Sammy said, "My name is Sammy. What's yours?" "My name is Jeffery," said the man. I will grant any wish possible. "Great,"said Sammy. "I have a lot of wishes."

The man asked Sammy what he wanted. Sammy's first wish was that he was wealthy. Then Jeffrey said, "so many kids ask for that wish." Jeffrey thought that life was about having fun not being rich. Sammy's next wish was a familiar one. He wanted a mansion. Then he wished almost everything a greedy boy would ask for. He wished his parents made 1 million dollars a day.

Sammy's house is packed. He knows that he's the wealthiest person in school. He had at least 10 rooms with nothing in them. He can barely walk to his room without kicking a toy. He has every sports autograph ever. Sammy's backpack has an input cell, phone, I pod computer, T.V., and a play station. He doesn't let anyone use anything. Sammy would say, "Who wants to play Playstation2?" Everyone would raise their hand but he didn't let them use it.

Sammy realizes that he has a lot of electronics and toys. He thinks about the kids who have no toys. They beg for food. After, Sammy picked up that same leaf. He rubbed it and Jeffrey was behind him. "I want to wish back everything," said Sammy. But Jeffrey tells him that once you wish for something you can't wish it back. Sammy thinks what he could do.

Sammy wishes he had a car. Then he wishes he had a driver's license. Then he drove it to charity with all of the stuff he had. He gave it to them. They were so, so, so happy. He gave the drivers license to them. Then Sammy wishes they had his house with everything in it. Then he wishes them food. Then Sammy wishes for a house to live in. He wishes that he had really nice parents. Sammy knows that all he needs is a good life. He feels proud of himself.
